

Anarchist Innovation Station

Welcome. Thank you for your willingness to engage in conversation with us about how to innovate your position in the world to advance our shared goal of a free and stateless society.

These are the stated goals, we would like to add more:

- Delegitimizing the State
- Promote liberty in your conversations
- Promote liberty in public writings (letters-to-editors, web pages, articles, etc.)
- Correct others when they fall for statist bromides and myths
- Correct others when they fall for the stateholm syndrome
- Avoid statist puffery in language
- Challenge the statist paradigm

We want to provide insurance that is affordable and that enables people to make decisions that they would otherwise feel they did not have enough support to make.

Morals, Vices, and Boundaries

- physical boundaries
- how do you communicate boundaries
- where do you draw boundaries
- fences
- flags
- dogs can be a boundary
- a closed door is a boundary

It's just not potent enough.

Growing food makes the world more comfortable. It will never create anarchy.

We are not going to end slavery by being in the middle of the woods or by living under the false pretense that others are our masters.

People who think that they must take care of their own basic needs are acting in an old paradigm. Once they realize their worth does not depend on whether or not they are gardening their own food...Moving out to the land temporarily, to see what it feels like to be taken care of by mother earth, is good.

Caravan Boundaries

Fear

They fear a Mad world. Dog eat dog. Eye for an eye. Someone could just come up and kill me.

The importance of networking

We don't need to change people, we just want to give them another option - so they can do the thing that they would have done either way. They still have to buy things.

How to flourish in your new life

Ownership of your time, of your life, and of your game.

You don't have to sell yourself to others in order to thrive.

Don't be somebody's bitch.

Self-ownership is a personal lifestyle and moral code that is the most effective means of thriving in the new world.

Trade networks.
